SUPERVISORS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 17.—McCulloch and Rollins are working pretty well together on the appointment of Supervisors, two more having been confirmed to-day, and two more will be confirmed to-morrow. McCulloch, however, to-day rejected Hudson, of Massachusetts, whom Rollins was very solicitous to have confirmed. Cummins, of Indiana, was also rejected. Alex Fulton, for Maryland, and Bennett, for South Carolina and North Carolina, confirmed to-day, are bitter Radicals.

ANNUAL REPORTS.

Most of the annual report of the different District and Department Military Commanders have been received at the War Department. That of General Sherman, which includes reports from General Sheridan and others, gives interesting details of military operations against the Indians up to the 30th of June last.

HON. R. C. MILLER.

Senator elect from Georgia, in a letter to a friend in this city, says "I placed myself in opposition to nearly all my friends by frankly accepting the terms tendered in the reconstruction acts. It speaks well for their genuineness, and it is not a little gratifying to me that, while I actively and openly opposed them, I retained their confidence. They very well understand that I will, as a citizen or as a Senator, offer no factious opposition to Gen. Grant's administration. On the contrary, so far as is consistent with my duty to my country and my obligations to the Constitution, I will sustain it.

ILLEGAL FEE.

The Commissioner of Patents has decided that Judges of the Supreme Court of this District have no right to exact a fee of twenty-five dollars for each case of appeal from the Commissioner. The practice has existed a number of years.

ANOTHER CONTESTANT.

Leonard Sleyers (Radical) has given notice that he will contest the election of Mollit (Democrat) to Congress from the Third District of Pennsylvania.

REFORM.

Several prominent Radicals here express determination to take a firm stand against those men who, being rejected by their own people, ask Congress to grant what the people have refused.

CHIEF ENGINEER'S REPORT.

General Humphreys, Chief Engineer of the army, has submitted his report for the fiscal year ending June 30th to the Secretary of War. He says material progress has been made during the year upon those portions of the sea coast and lake frontier defenses not affected by the questions respecting the increased use to be made of iron in covering and protecting guns and gunners' seats against the action of projectiles of very large caliber. He thinks that these questions require much deliberate and prolonged examination. The restoration of forts on the Southern sea coast has been commenced, and a large portion of the defenses of New Orleans, Mobile, and Pensacola have been placed in a condition for use.

His estimate for the seaboard defenses for the fiscal year ensuing, are based on the very moderate progress in the defenses, and strongly urges that the appropriations asked for be made. He asks for appropriations for three purposes to the amount of $2,455,500, including $260,000 for Fort Wayne and Detroit, $50[illegible] for defenses on the Northern and Eastern frontiers, $117,500; on the Southern coast, $624,500, on the Pacific coast, $300,000; and for barracks for engineer' posts and depots, $[illegible].

Gen. Humphreys says that contractors on river and harbor improvements very frequently fail to comply with their contracts, especially unless they are greatly to the advantage of the contractor. A change in the mode of procedure is recommended, and it is advised that authority be granted to the engineers in charge of these works to purchase material in open market and employ labor by the day in cases where contractors wait in their contracts, as experience has proved the system of contracts prescribed by the appropriating acts to be the worst possible mode of carrying on the improvements of rivers and harbors.

Gen. Humphreys submits estimates showing the amount required to complete the various improvements, and also for the ensuing fiscal year. The appropriations asked for under the latter head, amount to $6,328,098.

HON. E. B. WASHBURNE, of Illinois, arrived last night, and was the observed of all observers to-day. He called on Commissioner Rollins, and had a long interview this morning. It intends remaining until Congress meets.

SENATOR THAYER,

of Nebraska, arrived this morning, and will remain till Congress assembles.

THE EVARTS DINNER.

The dinner given in New York to-night by Evarts to Gen. Grant and the President's Cabinet Ministers, is construed here as part of Evarts' programme to be retained in the Cabinet, and to ascertain whether Grant would be likely to keep any of the other members, but Grant's quiet refusal to meet socially with them settles that question beyond doubt.

THURLOW WEED

is reported to be the prime mover in this little game to entrap Grant.

SECRETARY SCHOFIELD

is now in this city. He has just right to attend Evarts' dinner

The Venango Oil Transportation Company have sold to the Erie Railroad Company, for the sum of $1,100,000, a water front of 200 feet, at the Venango Oil Docks, in Weehawken. The transfer was made subject to a mortgage of $250,000, held by the Hoboken Land Improvement Company. The certainty that this locality, six to distant day, will be the grand depot and terminus of the Western and South railroads, induced the Erie Company to pay this large sum for property by securing this valuable water front.

In accordance with the will of the late Edwin A. Stevens, the Stevens Battery is to be completed at a cost not exceeding $1,000,000. Gen. Geo. B. McClellan has been engaged to superintend the work at a salary of $10,000 a year. This engagement was effected in Paris, by the late Mr. Stevens, shortly before his death, Gen. McClellan and he having been negotiating with several of the European governments for the construction of a battery similar to the one projected by Mr. Stevens. A new suit against the directors of the Erie Railroad Company was begun in the Supreme Court Chambers, this morning. Sally Shields, to-day, on application of Aug. Belmont. The complaint is founded on affidavits by Frank Work and others, charging that the getting forth that money of the Erie Company has been used by Gould, Fisk, and Lane, in furtherance of stock speculations for their private interests. Affidavit further set forth that Fisk is insolvent, and is an adventurer from New England.

It is also alleged in the affidavits that Fisk's Opera House had been purchased in the sole name of Fisk, with money of the company to the amount of $350,000. Fisk, Gould and Lane are further charged with having issued from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 of spurious bonds, with which they have been operating in Wall street. The affidavits further allege that the above named individuals have denied the other directors access to the books, and, in fact, managed the affairs of the company exclusively for their own interest, and in a reckless manner.

Judge Sutherland granted an injunction, which directs the officers and agents of the company to refrain from increasing the capital stock of the Erie Railroad Company beyond the amount now issued, and from issuing the bonds in the hands of bona fide holders, and also orders that the defendants refrain from removing any of the books, papers, records or funds of the Company from the jurisdiction of the court, and directs that the funds shall be applied for no purpose but the payment of the legitimate debts of the Company, and that the same be disposed of in such manner as the court may from time to time direct.

The Court also orders that the officers and agents of the company shall refrain from in any manner obstructing any of the directors from examining any of the books of the said company.

Another suit has been begun by Charles M. Intosh against the directors and August Belmont, in which an injunction has been obtained until the matter is heard. It is aid against the first suit does not appear.

General Grant, Horace Greeley, John Russell Young, and others of note, took breakfast at Delmonico's this morning.

T. Stewart at his house on the Fifth Avenue; Friday he goes to Washington.

O'Conor presided, and among the guests were Gen. Grant, Banks and Schofield, Admiral Farragut, ex-Gov. Clifford, A. T. Stewart, Judges Sutherland, Daly, Davies, and the majority of the leading members of the bar of the city.

The first toast was "The President," which was received with applause. The chairman then gave the toast of "President elect." General Grant, on rising to respond, was received with enthusiastic demonstrations of applause. He said he thanked the members of the bar of the United States for the honor to which they had received the second toast intended to be complimentary to himself. From no other community would he have more pleasure in receiving a demonstration of regard than from the citizens he saw present.

The next toast was the guest of the evening, Mr. Evarts, in responding, made a most eloquent speech, in the course of which he alluded to his elevation to the office of Attorney General. He said he owed not so much to any personal merit on his part, to the partial estimation of value of professional services, coupled with a generous disregard of political services.

Mr. Evarts also spoke of the uniform kindness and consideration he had experienced at the hands of his brethren of the bar. Subsequently other toasts were drunk and speeches made by Gen. Schofield, Admiral Farragut, G. W. Guyod, Judge Daly, Governor Hoffman, and others, and the company dispersed at an advanced hour.

NASHVILLE ROBBERIES.

Dr. Eve's Residence Gone Through.

[From the Banner, 17th.]

Last Saturday night about 12 o'clock, some one of the bold and daring gangs of burglars that are at present operating so successfully in and about the city, effected an entrance into the residence of Dr. Paul F. Eve, northwest corner of Church and Vine streets. They entered the dining-room from the west side, cutting through the window shade and shutter, and through the window sash and glass, and then climbed in. They then worked their way into an apartment occupied by the Rev. Mr. Duncan, father-in-law of Dr. Eve. Picking up Mr. Duncan's watch they carried it into the hall, broke open the lock, abstracted seventy dollars, and scattered its contents over the floor, reserving only such articles as they desired for their own use. Before doing this, however, they administered chloroform to the occupant of the room, and left him so much under the influence of the drug as to render him harmless. Whether some of the family went in to awake him Sunday morning, they found him lying diagonally across the bed, so completely stupefied as to be unable to move any part of his person was visible. The wonder is that he was not smothered to death. He was in a deep sleep, and was only awakened without considerable effort upon the part of the family. Mr. Duncan is eighty-seven years of age, rather feeble, and the chloroform doubtless had much greater influence over him than over a man of half or a younger person. He says that he felt the burglars moving him and his bed about, but was without the power either to stir or speak.

The burglars next went up stairs to the room of Mr. Paul Carmichael and his wife. Upon the latter gentleman being aroused to the importunities of a friend, was unfortunately passing the evening from home. The intruders noiselessly hurst open the door, and threw a handkerchief saturated with chloroform over Mr. Carmichael's face and then rifled his pockets of some $400 in money. With this booty secured they left the room, and paid a visit to the house of Mr. John M. Bass, located in the adjoining yard. At the latter place they were not so successful, for they found the doors and windows firmly secured. Repairing to the stable of Mr. Bass they coolly and quietly sat down, examined and divided the spoils, this fact having been ascertained by a number of papers that were found in the stable Sunday morning.

The whole affair from beginning to end is one of the most elegant pieces of downright cool impudence we have lately heard of. The place of their entrance into Dr. Eve's residence being in full view of one of the most frequented streets in the city, and the hour of the commission not being a very late one, the question is unduly arises "where were the police all this time?" In this vicinity some outrageous burglary occurs every few nights, and we really think that it is high time that the authorities should ascertain what degree of vigilance is exercised by those whom they have appointed to guard the lives and property of our citizens.

Inquisitorial Habeas Corpus Case—Proclamation by Lieut. Gov. Gleason, of Florida.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 17.—In the United States Court this morning, the trial of the habeas corpus case commenced, in which the counsel for Carran Griffin, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for shooting a white man, in a fight growing out of the election in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, last fall, was heard. Judge Underwood presided, and Judge Bond, of Maryland, was present, that Gov. Reed recognized them by sending messages and transmitting papers to them. That twelve members of the Senate were in favor of the impeachment of an officer is in no case legislative business, but is exclusively vested in the Executive. If any one may or will be transacted at a special as a regular term, that the Constitution declares any officer when impeached shall be deemed to be suspended from the execution of the powers and duties of his office until acquitted by the Senate, that Harrison Reed, in gross contempt of all the powers of the Senate, has, entirely, the only tribunal which, under the Constitution, has jurisdiction in cases of impeachment and violations of the constitution of the state, issued his proclamation declaring that I am disqualified from performing any of the duties of this office until acquitted, or submit himself to the judgment of the Legislature, and engaged to himself the right to pronounce the impeachment void, and proceeds in his office as if no impeachment had been pronounced; that no citizen can, consistently with his oath, be found guilty against the regularity of his impeachment or to the warrant for his arrest, and the law in this case known as diligence, when even one man's Governor and one who is not, but recognizes all to submit to arrest and go before the tribunal appointed by the Constitution to judge the charges.

He further proclaims that said Harrison Reed, Governor of Florida, is deemed by the people of this State to be disqualified from performing any of the duties of office until acquitted by the Senate, and that the powers have devolved upon him by the Constitution and laws of the State. The consequences and anarchy which will inevitably ensue if any man impeached or not tried, however exalted his station, refuses to submit to the trial provided by the Constitution. The movement is signed by W. H. Gleason, Lieut. Governor and acting Governor, countersigned by Geo. A. Gibbs, Secretary of State, and bears the impression of the seal of the State.

WALL STREET.

The Erie Wonder and Stock Gambling.

[From the Special Despatch to the Cincinnati Commercial, 17th.]

The Sun of to-morrow will publishing the following exposure of the Erie speculation:

For some weeks past the directors of the Erie Railway Company have been secretly issuing millions upon millions of dollars' worth of new stock, and selling it for whatever price they could get. A number of other stock gambling schemes were set on foot with a view to obtain control of the company, and make their own men directors in place of the present board. As, however, the bonded debt continued in the market, the price of shares kept sinking, until on Friday last they touched thirty-five dollars, and the panic party, who meanwhile, many of them, had purchased heavily, on a rising market, purchased stock to England, but their friends there refused to sell at any price, shipping the stock back at the same time by steamer. The brokers on both sides of the Atlantic then began to cry, knowing they would receive plenty of stock by the ten days period required by a steamer to cross the Atlantic, undertook to sell short, for a wing in the meanwhile to make their deliveries, but suddenly the speculators who had been selling the new stock, having plenty of money, determined to bought up all the new stock actually here, and as the steamer cannot arrive with the stock from England for a week to come, they have compelled the foolish brokers who made the sales to go into the stock market to buy in at fifty-five and sixty to meet their contracts. The amount lost and won by individuals in this two days' gambling in stocks is estimated at sums ranging from one hundred and fifty to five hundred thousand dollars each.

The stock market opened amid great excitement, particularly Erie, New York Central, and Northwestern railway shares. Business on the street was entirely confined to these stocks, and the volume of business was very large. There was the greatest excitement about Erie, and the prices ran up and down the scale, Reading fairly paralyzing the street brokers. Before 10 o'clock nobody seemed capable of doing its value, and all sorts of figures ranged alongside each other. At one moment it was quoted at sixty, and a few moments afterward at fifty-three. The opening price was at fifty-three and three quarters, and the first sale was at sixty, and then it closed. New York Central opened strong in the vicinity of 124, but soon gave way, and closed at 122½. The tone of Chicago and Northwestern was comparatively steady. There was a reaction about noon, and prices began to settle.

The great combination caught many wealthy operators short of Erie, and this is the cause of the sudden remarkable rise in this stock. Several failures are reported among the speculators refused to negotiate except upon the best of securities.

Daniel Drew was reported to have lost half a million or more, and will probably be unpublished more seriously before the end. There was excitement in the gold room over the high price. The short interest is large, and sellers' contracts rates for borrowing. A high as one-half of one per cent, per day was paid for the use of one lot, and one-quarter per cent. was paid for several lots. Many of the large houses refused to negotiate except upon the best of securities.

She at once carried her hand to her mouth for the purpose of picking it off with her teeth, when something caused her to catch her breath suddenly, when the bee was drawn into the throat and lodged in the windpipe, where it has since remained, causing inflammation and great pain. All other means having failed, it has been resolved to resort to a surgical operation, which will be performed by Dr. Brasher, of Florence, assisted by several prominent physicians of Cincinnati.

The students cast a gloom over the entire corps of cadets, with whom Mr. Kerr was a general favorite.

Judge Samuel A. Douglas, of Florida, has instituted a suit in the United States Circuit court, for the district of Virginia, against a firm in Greenville county, to the recovery of $1,000, the amount of a bond given in 1865, and to be paid, with interest, in the current money of the Confederate States. The makers of the bond made a tender of Confederate currency in payment of the same, but Judge Douglas contends that silver and gold were the only current money of the confederacy, and hence the suit.

Hon. Chas. B. Lord, a distinguished citizen of St. Louis, and one of the presiding judges of the circuit court, died in St. Louis on Monday. Judge Lord settled in St. Louis in 1850, and for twenty-five years has been a prominent member of the legal profession. He practised after until 1875, a period of twelve years, during which time he established a high character as a sound legal thinker, eminent principles of equitable, and effective advocacy before the courts. During that year he was elected to preside over the St. Louis Land court, and was again elected in 1867. Upon the adoption of the present state constitution his office was vacated with that of other judges, and he was thereupon appointed to the circuit court bench of the judicature of the county, and obtained in that capacity almost the heavy day of his death. For two years his health has been precarious, and at times he has been severely and critically ill, but during the last term of his court he never had a day's

The Rebels. "So-Called."

The Radical newspapers say that the rebels have got possession of the press of Kentucky. It must be borne in mind, however, that under the Radical construction of our mother tongue, all who are not Radicals are rebels. Holden of North Carolina, and Brown, of Georgia—both of whom were original secessionists and excellent rebels so long as there was any chance for Dixie—are no longer rebels, because they have turned Radical. They have purged themselves by swallowing the frog of reconstruction. They can now take the test oath or any other oath. They swear in Radical English or Saxon English as they will, and sing out loud in a "most pleasant and melancholy" tones. Hence when the Radicals say that the rebels "riot like wolves" in Kentucky, they use a figurative expression for Wolford and Brandlette, and an hundred gallant Union soldiers, have suddenly become rebels in Radical parlance. Let us assume, however, for the sake of argument, that every newspaper in Kentucky, and in the South, is conducted by rebels; or rather, to put the case more accurately, by persons who were rebels, "so-called," during the war; and what does it prove?

No man can pass through a great war without learning something. War, like colleges and travel, liberalizes and educates the man who takes part in it. He cannot remain unchanged, and at the end he realizes the situation far more acutely than the man who has staid at home. This it is often said, and we do not doubt with perfect truth, that the soldiers of both armies would have been the best peacemakers. Why so? Because they were brave men, generous men, honest men. A man does not go for a soldier of his own accord if he have not stuff in him. The soldiers who fought each other long and well had reason mutually to admire and trust each other. All the violence since the war on either side has come from civilians or non-fighting soldiers. The liberal men of the period are those who were sincere Union men and sincere Confederates, and, as a general rule, the Confederates have been much more temperate in urging their demands than their friends, the Union men. The Confederate feels that he has been wronged and cheated but then he did not expect much. The Union men feel that they had a right to expect what they fought for—the restoration of the Union—and they are naturally incensed that, instead of the restoration of the Union, they are thrust to one side by fire-side saints and stay-at-home patriots, while reconstruction hovers over the land and shoddy rules the roost. Original and consistent Union men are accordingly more vehement in their denunciations of the Radical policy than original and consistent rebels, who are willing to make large sacrifices for the sake of peace.

As a matter of just reasoning, however, the argument and not the orator ought to be considered. Is reconstruction just? Is the policy of Congress fair? Do the acts of the Radicals lead to peace? These are the points to be investigated in a candid spirit and without regard to personal antecedents or partisan relations. The Republican party professes to believe in free speech, and when a rebel speaks, if he does not speak as it wishes him, it denounces him. The Republican party professes to be an advocate of peace, and it goes about its work by proscribing every one in the South who is not a Radical. In a word, it is reduced to this: if you fail to agree with him in political opinion, it is treason to the State. This is the spirit that we are now fighting. It is common to hear Radical orators declare that the Democratic party has no policy beyond a general opposition to the Republican party. It might be said with much more justice that the Republican party has no policy but that of proscribing all who oppose it. By these sweeping disqualifications it retains its hold upon the patronage and power of the government, and as new exclusions are required it will create them. It has already had three separate plans of reconstruction. It now seeks a fourth. Maryland and Kentucky do not suit it; and, when it has settled the affairs of Maryland and Kentucky, it will turn its attention to the Democratic city of New York and such other non-Radical communities as may exist within its reach. This it calls "progress," and it is progress indeed!

General Grant committed himself to a magnanimous policy when he received the surrender of Southern armies. He has never withdrawn that committal in any public manner. We trust he never will withdraw it. Presently he will be the supreme head of the nation, with power to do what Andrew Johnson tried to do, that is, restore the Union to the people of both sections. If he does that, he will crown his administration with glory. If he does it not, he will break the plighted word of a soldier given to the South in the presence of the world. We do not mean to assume in advance that he will disgrace himself and the country by a harsh course of proscription against the people of the South. Nor do we pledge our support in advance if he does the clever thing. There is a wide difference of policy between the Republican and Democratic parties outside of reconstruction. Reconstruction ought not to be a partisan question at all. General Grant ought not to allow it to be so. It should be abandoned by the common consent of all parties, and the States of the South be returned to their equal place in the Union without any restraints that are not imposed on the States of the North, and with no other guaranties than those supplied by their manhood and their necessities.

☞ The Democrat of yesterday announces a change of proprietors. It will be conducted hereafter by Messrs Hatching & Perrin. Mr. Hatcher takes charge of the editorial department and Mr. Perrin will conduct the business. Under this arrangement the Democrat can hardly fail to be improved in every way. Mr. Hatcher has a reputation as an editor and writer of twenty years' standing. He is widely known and favorably known all over the South. He has been connected hitherto with the LOUISVILLE JOURNAL, and commended himself to the readers of that newspaper by a humor which is always admirable and versatile. His experience, talents, and industry give a guarantee in advance of what his editorial management will be. Mr. Perrin is well known in Louisville and in Kentucky as the Secretary of the LOUISVILLE JOURNAL COMPANY. He is an energetic and upright business man, who will deal fairly with the public and not allow the money matters of the Democrat to flag. It gives us pleasure to make this announcement, and it will give us still greater pleasure to recognize the Democrat in the future as a friend and not as an enemy.

A Road to Vincennes.

We publish elsewhere a communication concerning the utility of a railroad direct from this city to Vincennes, Ind., in which the writer takes occasion to indulge in some sharp criticisms upon an article on the same subject which appeared in the COURIER-JOURNAL of Monday. He says the assertion that the projected road would pass through a section of country unsurpassed in its wealth of mineral resources, timber, and agricultural products," and which is without railroad facilities, and that this should constitute an inducement to our capitalists to build the road material assistance "nonsense and absurdity," because there never was a projected road which did not hold out the same inducements. Admitting, for the sake of argument, that this is true (which it is not), we shall still contend that the conclusion in articles stated does not follow.

The road would pass through portions of Floyd, Orange, Martin and Davies counties, whose nearest railroads are those which lead to Cincinnati; and to say that, by giving these sections a direct route to Louisville, the distance being less than one-half of that to Cincinnati, we could not divert the trade to this city certainly partakes of the nonsensical and the absurd. The road being a branch of the Ohio & Mississippi, from this city to St Louis would be nearly an air-line route. It would then become the great thoroughfare between Central Kentucky and St. Louis, and the value of its business would be immensely enhanced upon the completion of the proposed line of railroad from Louisville into the State of Virginia. All the freights for the Northwest via Louisville would pass over this road, and every railroad and steamboat line centering at Louisville from the South would become a feeder to this new route to St. Louis because of its shortness and directness.

The strictures of our correspondent upon the lack of enterprise exhibited by the merchants of Louisville in not trying to build up a trade in Indiana—if such is the case—have no bearing upon the merits of the enterprise. There are many back-woods districts in this Western country whose entire population, probably, have never seen the inside of a school-house or a church; but this fact is not regarded by enterprising people as conclusive evidence that no necessity exists for these institutions in those sections.

One great reason why Louisville has not heretofore secured her proper share of the trade of Indiana is because the Ohio river presented an obstacle to the shipment of freight and the convenience of travel. This, we are aware, should not have been regarded as a solid objection, but man is a busy animal, and, other things being equal or nearly so, he will go to that point to trade whose means of transit set him down at his destination "without change of cars or break of bulk." With the completion of the Ohio river bridge at this point will disappear this objectionable feature, and then, with proper railroad facilities to Indiana, we shall be much mistaken in the stuff our merchants are made of if a large proportion of the trade from that region does not come to this city. Let us have the railroad to Vincennes by all means.

European advices received yesterday by the steamer City of London, contain full particulars of the recent earthquake and other phenomena over there, heretofore briefly referred to by the cable. The Cronstadt journals mention an extraordinary subsidence of the waters of the Baltic, in mid-bay there. It began in the evening, the wind being southwest and rather fresh, at 10 o'clock at night the level of the sea was a foot lower than ordinary, and continued still to sink. The following morning, before 6 o'clock, it was five feet below its normal point, the wind having altered round to the northeast, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the greatest depression was arrived at, namely, three feet and two inches. The water then began to mount rapidly, and during the night exceeded its ordinary level by a foot. Nearly all the steamers plying between Cronstadt and St. Petersburg were aground, a circumstance almost unprecedented.

THE CITY.

Discharged and Rearrested.

Two negroes, Len. White and Maney P. Blair, had a hearing in the Criminal Court yesterday, on the charge of grand larceny in purloining money from the till of a confectionery on the corner of Broadway and Center streets, some time ago. On the statement of the prosecuting witnesses, that the amount stolen was not more than five or six dollars, which does not constitute grand larceny, the prisoners were discharged. They were soon rearrested and lodged in jail, and will be presented before the City Court to-day, to answer the charge of petit larceny. Indeed, the way of the transgressor is hard!

Another Colored Prisoner.

Last night officers Colter and Kreamer arrested as a suspected felon a negro man named Obie Brown, who is employed at R. A. Robinson's tobacco factory, on Fourth street. A MAD LOVER.

His Escape from an Ohio Lunatic Asylum and Capture in This City.

On Monday, Ex-policeman Thomas Slater received a dispatch from a physician in Cincinnati, directing him to arrest and detain a man named Poindexter who had escaped from the Ohio Lunatic Asylum, and who, it was thought, was fleeing toward Louisville. Mr. Slater accordingly kept a sharp lookout, and had just entered the city, but we failed to learn how he came hither. Slater happened to know the man, and had little or no trouble in securing him. Without divulging his purpose, Mr. Slater took the lunatic in charge and loitered and rode about with him until he received orders from his father at Hopkinsville to keep him in custody regardless of expense and deliver him into the hands of his family. When overtaken, Poindexter conversed very rationally and at no time exhibited signs of insanity, but to guard against his elopement Mr. Slater supplied him with liquor. In this condition he was taken to the Police Superintendent's office and comfortably lodged for the night. He will be taken to Hopkinsville by his captor this morning.

We understand that Poindexter had been confined in the asylum but a short time. He was sent there by his family in the hope that he might be restored to soundness of mind. The cause of his madness is said to have been an affair of the heart. He loved and wooed one of the fair daughters of Hopkinsville in the blissful hope of making her his life partner. The suit was not congenial to the young lady, and for the best of reasons—she had bestowed her heart upon another. While Poindexter was pressing his claim with all the impassioned and ceaseless eloquence of a lover, Cupid, his inamorata became the bride of his rival, the man she truly loved. This was not only a wreck of hope to Poindexter, but a shock to his faculties that rendered him a perfect maniac. Hence his committal to the asylum. It is hoped by his friends that his escapade was the result of returning sanity. He is quite a young man, not more than twenty-six years of age. We trust he may fully regain his mental balance, and leave the insaneness never again to jeopardize it in the same cause.

THE FUEL GLEANERS.

Thickly Peopled Field and Meager Harvest.

This latitude was visited by the first genuine touch of winter, 1868, yesterday. It was a keen specimen, too, we can assure our friends in the balmy tropics. Everybody was, more or less, thrown into a shivery condition; coal was heaped in fire-places instituttingly, and fine and heavy wrappers were fastened tighter and more tightly around the persons of those who had such articles. Those who had them! Alas! myriads of fellow mortals had none, and perhaps never will have any. Just think of that, ye quality, while on the verge of bleak and howling and pitiless winter, and rest easy in confidence if you can.

All of the classes that make up society in our great metropolis, and who clattered in the piercing north wind yesterday, the fuel gatherers particularly attested our attention. Wherever we chanced to move through and about the city, we met these lowly children of misfortune. Some of them were superannuated, some were mere infants, a few were in the hey-day of youth and strength, but all were spiritless and ragged. Along the river shore, by the commons, around the coal yards, on the streets, in the by-ways, and, indeed, everywhere, we saw these gleaners—mostly feminine, either levying upon drift-wood, refuse blocks, chips, coal, and all else that could be utilized for burning, even to the minutest particles, or tottering homeward with full bags, baskets, and other receptacles, balanced upon their heads or swinging upon their arms. This is their main occupation when the winter blasts come down to freeze their already bloodless forms. Through sleet and snow and rain they go in quest of a bundle of sticks or a handful of coals, and when they are thus rewarded for their exposure to the storm, they return to their hovels with nimbler tread, and who knows but that many of them instinctively express their gratitude upon bended knee. Gathering fuel is but one phase of their squalid lives. There is companion picture, which, were we ever to paint it, would make us shudder, would make us shudder even more acutely than they do in the bitter arctic gales. We will leave that scene unshifted, trusting that philanthropy will find it out and brighten the soul or colors ere it is too late.

THE LIEDERKRANZ.

A Grand Musical and Gastronomical Fete.

This musical society, which may rivals the most renowned societies in the country, meets on every Tuesday evening in Beck's Hall, for rehearsal. The meeting last night was attended by nearly all of the members, and the rehearsals were of that high order which is almost peculiar to the German portion of our citizens. By special invitation we spent an hour in their hall, and were highly entertained even by the rehearsal of a number of choruses which they were just learning under the exacting and faultless leadership of the director, Oscar Berner. A number of choruses with which they were more familiar were also sung. The society has in the short time it has been under the direction of Professor Berner attained a degree of perfection that is almost wonderful, and the concert rendezvous already aware. We regret we cannot promise our citizens another of their excellent concerts before January.

At the close of the rehearsal last evening, Mr. E. Gross, proprietor of the Germania Hotel, formerly the Snell House, corner of First and Jefferson streets, announced to the members of the society that he was just opening his house to the public, and invited all to participate of his hospitalities. Of course the invitation met with a hearty and unanimous response. The society repaired forthwith to the "Germania," when a table literally burdened with the luxuries of the season was surrounded by a jolly perer. After partaking of the substantials, the guests sipped their wine, smoked their cigars, and the members of the Liederkranz sang in good style a few of their choicest selections. We were indeed fortunate in being one of the number, and in return for our enjoyment we wish the Liederkranz and mine host many returns of the happy occasion.

THE LAST INQUEST.

Sudden Death of a Young Servant Girl.

A young colored girl, named Catharine, servant in the house of Mrs. Clark, on Twelfth street, between Magazine and Broadway, died quite suddenly and strangely yesterday morning. She had got breakfast and performed her house duties afterwards, as usual; but on reviving her own room she fell upon the floor and commenced a violent coughing and strangulation. Mrs. Clark was attracted by the noise, and hurried to the girl's assistance. She was laid upon a bed, when a profuse hemorrhage of the lungs set in, and in the midst of the crimson flow she expired. It is supposed that one of the main blood vessels was rent by the convulsive efforts of the girl. For more than a year she had been in delicate health, but had never ceased her accustomed work, nor shown any symptoms of a dangerous affliction. She was raised in Mrs. Clark's family, a strong attachment existed between them, and all regret her untimely death. The Coroner held an inquest as follows:

INQUEST NO. 220—Held on Twelfth street, between Magazine and Broadway, in the city of Louisville, Tuesday, November 17th, 1868, upon the body of Catharine Clark, colored, aged about twenty-six years. Verdict of the jury: That said Catharine Clark came to her death, as above, from the effects of internal hemorrhage.

Effect of the Weather.

Two cronies from the Emerald Isle, Pat Parsley and Tony Flynn, were indicted by the shaking and eager air of yesterday to crack their elbows off at the bar the law permits. Consequently they were taken in out of the cold to grace the humane police, and will undergo the mental reconstruction at the bar of justice this morning.

The Sunday Bail Case.

The case of Justices Clement and Dorsey against whom a rule was issued to show cause why they released M. Rosenbaum from jail on the Sabbath day, was yesterday called in the City Court, and, owing to the indisposition of Justice Clement, continued till next Tuesday.

Briefly Done.

The honorable City Court transacted all its business yesterday morning in exactly one hour by the watch. Judicial affairs are in a healthy state.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM.

A Devout Disciple of Mesmer Before the Courts on a Charge of Lunacy.

HE PLEADS HIS OWN CASE.

And Tells Some Wonderful Stories of the Freaks of Sympathetic Influence.

A STRANGE PHENOMENON.

A gentleman named Robert Sadler was arraigned before his honor Judge Bruce, in the Circuit Court yesterday, on a writ of de lunatico inquirendo. The case is a very peculiar one, and it is admitted that he is perfectly sane on all subjects save one, and that is animal magnetism or mesmerism, and on that he enters into the most radical and extravagant ideas.

Mr. Sadler is an Englishman by birth, is about 55 years of age, above the medium height of men, sallow complexion, light frame, hair slightly mixed with gray and a melancholy expression of the countenance that seemed to indicate that he had inflicted on himself mental troubles in life.

The writ was sued out in the matter, it seems, for the prosecution was conducted by Colonel Phil. Lee in the most liberal and gentlemanly manner, and with the greatest respect to the gentlemen's feelings. He, however, alleges that it is instigated to deprive him of an inheritance that falls to him from his parents in England, who are wealthy.

He lives three miles from Louisville on the Cane-run road, is a man of excellent education, and converses freely and rationally on the most difficult subjects of science and literature. He was for many years a schoolteacher in that neighborhood, where he has lived for thirty years, and bore a good reputation as such. Among the witnesses were Gov Meriwether, Dr. Bell, and other prominent citizens, who all testified to his industry, ability and sanity, except on the one subject of mesmerism, and confessed that on that he went far beyond all of whom they had ever heard. He conducted the case on his side principally by himself, and was assisted by Mr. Buford Twyman, and showed even more than ordinary ability.

He admitted all that was said in regard to his ideas on mesmerism, and advanced them in a plain and able manner to the jury. After the testimony was finished he held a conversation with Col. Lee in the presence of the court, and related many incidents of his life, wherein this sympathetic influence had acted upon him. He stated that he had a great repugnance to his theory though he believed it true, and thought it hard that one man should suffer on account of the ills of others. He says he believes more in animal magnetism than in spiritualism. Any one with whom he is connected by this magnetism is hurt if he can feel the pain though he does not know that it is so acute. He once felt the burning progress of a knife cutting in his side, and experienced inexpressible agonies, and afterwards learned that just such an operation as he had experienced had been performed the same day at the hospital in this city.

Once he was sitting in the midst of his family, on a quiet Sabbath afternoon, when he was stirred by a crushing sensation in his shoulder, and imagined the crushed bones distributed in his shoulder and arm, and experienced the consequent pain, though nothing apparently to the sight was the matter with his limb, and next day the city papers brought him the news of a man being thrown under the wheels of an omnibus and having his shoulder and arm broken.

At another time, while an operation on the throat of a person was being performed in the hospital here he felt distinctly the operation being made and the tube being thrust into his throat. This continued three or four days, and he afterwards learned of the similar operation being actually performed.

One day, while passing into his dining-room, he was suddenly overcome and fell backwards insensible on the floor, severely bruising his head. This time he suffered no pain whatever, and on consciousness returning he found his family around him bathing his head to restore him. He felt much anxiety in regard to the unusual case, and questioned members of his family closely as to whether there was any convulsions or frothing of the mouth, but there were no indications of anything more than an ordinary fainting spell. Some weeks since he detected a slight identity of epilepsy, but not very serious.

While at the farther end of his field one day he heard the fire bells ringing, and was warned that there was a fire which would do him some injury, and on coming to his house found the kitchen in a blaze.

One day he was made aware of an abortion being committed by the agency of this sympathy, and told persons near him that some casualty was being committed. He felt the pain-losses of the knife as it penetrated and suffered agony as intense as if the operation were really being performed upon him. This was also verified by the arrest of parties in the neighborhood a few days after for abortion. It was learned that the deed was committed on the same day and at the same hour that he suffered the pain.

One evening about sunset he felt a bullet strike him in the forehead, and though he was not shocked or knocked down, suffered no much pain. In five minutes after his little nephew came running to the house with the news that a man had been shot a short distance from his house.

Very often he feels a glass of whisky at his lips, and can even smell it though there is nothing of the kind near. This, he says, results from the sympathetic influence existing between him and the person at the time. Col. Lee here inquired if it smelt and tasted the same as if it were really so, when Mr. Sadler decularly remarked that "anyway he would rather be the principal."

These, he said, were only a few of the many incidents of the kind that occurred to him during his life, and said he did not expect that those who were not subject to this influence would credit such stories, but they were as true and manifest to him as common day doings are to ordinary people.

When questioned as to reports that he would get up in the night and scream and wake the inmates of the house, he said that often the pain occasioned by the hurting of some one with whom he was connected was so great that it was impossible for him to avoid giving vent to his anguish in screams, just as any one else would. He felt the pain equally as severe as the principal—that is, the one who is actually hurt. In reply to a question, he said he had no way of finding out whether distance destroys the effect of the sympathy or not, as he could not tell how far away from him the principal was at the time of the sensation.

After a lengthy and pleasant conversation with Col. Lee and the jury, in which he argued his views so well that he destroyed in the minds of his hearers the credulity that would exist with the reader. He talked so rationally and was so confident in his assertions that for the time all within his hearing seemed converts to his strange theory. He seemed indignant at being taken from the bosom of his family and dragged before a criminal court on such a charge for entertaining opinions no more in advance of the age, and consequently no more monstrous than those of Socrates, who was persecuted by the ignorant, but whom the progress of enlightenment and knowledge proved to be correct. He had lived in Kentucky thirty years; and with his own hands cleared and cultivated his farm, and now when he has settled himself down to spend the few remainder of his days in the enjoyment of the little fortune which he has by hard labor accumulated, it is hard that he is not allowed to do so in this country of a boasted free speech and free press.

The jury retired and, after being out about an hour, returned and reported that they could not agree, when they were discharged.

Theatre Comique.

The rain and mud does not seem to affect the size of the houses at the above popular place of amusement. The "White Fawn" is being improved upon every night. In addition to the "Fawn" is the olio entertainment which cannot be surpassed. The beautiful and accomplished vocalists, Miss Ada Newton, Hattie Mason, and Clara Devere hold the audience in perfect awe with their sweet melodious voices. They never fail to receive encores, and are decidedly the greatest favorites that have ever visited our city.

Magnificent Organ.

Skoolcraft & Co. yesterday received from Bavaria, Germany, a superb organ, manufactured there expressly for the German Catholic church on Shelby street, near Broadway. The instrument is finished in the most unique and elaborate style, having statues of the twelve apostles, and other decidedly original and elegant features. It will be ready for use in the church within three weeks.

COFFEE AND DINAH.

Their Numerous Family of Sluggards in Louisville.

Gingeneral principles, the everlasting African is not a very useful citizen, just now, at any rate. He is sadly prone to vagabondism and all its attendant evils. Such we know to be his leading propensities as developed here. The city is more completely overrun with sambo and his progeny at present than ever before. They swarm every nook and corner where they may lounge with impunity, and from push the white canaille from their peace of domicile. It would not astonish us in the least if it were not chiefly for result of laziness on the part of the whites of necro whom the Radicals love so well. Laziness is the word and the epidemic. And we know that indolence begets a long train of vile practices, and ends at last in filling our jails. It is true that some of the idle negroes in the midst of us are not blameable for their condition—those, for example, who have been thrown out of work by the stoppage of operations in our brickyards and other manufactories—but the great majority of them are idle and vicious from deliberate choice. We have one of hundreds of cases in point. A former in this vicinity recently needed a small number of negro men to dig potatoes for two weeks. He came to the city for that purpose, but all his efforts to engage the hands proved unavailing. As a last and more hopeful resort he confided the job to three or four police officers. They spent several days among the loafing blacks, but with no better success than the farmer, who had offered to pay them one dollar per day and board them. Now, as no negroes or whites, having no visible means of support reject such fair overture, what is the inference? That few, they say and think, and some of them even maintain themselves in "style." They must steal, they do steal. And now that winter is fast approaching they will become less fastidious touchings, and attempt to steal by wholesale. We have in mind the vagabond class only, those who have dropped into Louisville in their predatory passage from pillar to post, and not our resident colored people, who are proverbially honest and industrious. We add also these sluggards and rogues to look well to their hides, and cultivate honesty or the protective influence of the Freedmen's Bureau, for our citizens do not mean longer to be in pe od upon by them.

Louisville Opera House.

Miss Charlotte Crampton, the present starat this establishment, is fast winning her way into popular favor.

Her per-ormance of Hamlet on Monday evening, and that of Medea last night, prove her to be a perfect mistress of her profession. Her acting is of the old school, and in these days of sensational and claptrap dramas it is very refreshing to see such acting as we were wont to see during the days of Macready, the elder Booth and Charlotte Cushman. Miss Crampton, by the way, appears in one of Miss Cushman's great characters this evening—that of "Meg Merrilies," in the operatic drama of "Guy Mannering, and we feel assured that the performance considerably. She possesses a lot of the "Meg Merrilies," in the operatic drama of "Guy Mannering, and we feel assured that the performance considerably. She possesses a lot of the genius that characterized the great tragedienne, and will be under the immediate supervision of Manager Duffield.

We trust Miss Crampton will receive that attention that she merits from this her native city.

A New Albany Editor on a Louisville Judge.

The New Albany Ledger copies the account published in the COURIER-JOURNAL yesterday morning of the arrest and trial in the City Court of a girl named Mary Knight, and her father, with the remarks of Judge Craig before passing sentence upon them, and in that connection takes occasion to express its opinion of Judge Craig, as follows:

Judge Craig is a peculiar judge in some cases, but he has a streak of vanity that is always manifested whenever an opportunity to moralize is presented. Several cases have been disposed of by Judge Craig, for it is to a great extent true, but if he intends to convey the idea that Indiana does not afford as much room for the development of her people, he is ignorant of the working of one of the best school institutions of our State. It is an unjustifiable ignorance in Judge Craig, for we have heard him dilate by the half hour upon the glories of Indiana and the customs of ancient times, when about to consign some poor devil to the work-house. If he is so well versed in the customs, manners and fashions of olden times we should think he would post himself in the history of the present.

The RIVER continues to rise slowly at this point. Last evening the marks indicated six feet water in the canal, four feet water in the locks, and three feet water on the falls, a rise of about two inches since our last report. The river was rising at Pittsburg and Cincinnati yesterday, with a fair depth on the falls. Arrivals from below reported light for the time of year. The weather yesterday was cold and cloudy, with indications of falling weather. Light snow fell and whirled about in the air, but melted as it fell
